NI-Gas Gives Communities Pointers On Attracting Industry To Region

A good political and social climate, good schools, a choice of churches, plus adequate transportation and site space are some of the major factors in attracting industry to an area. John Sticklen, head of area industrial development for Northern Illinois Gas Co., made these points Monday night at a meeting in Lincoln-Way high school. The meeting was arranged by the Chambers of Commerce of New Lenox and Mokena thru Barton Juell, district superintendent of NI-Gas.

Chamber members and officials of those communities and Frankfort, with a delegation present from Orland Park made up an audience numbering more than 80 area leaders who are eager to bring industry into the region. Mr. Sticklen was introduced by Mr. Juell, who also presented officers from the Joliet Regional Chamber of Commerce.

Communities can make up their own use plans, Mr. Sticklen said, but he advocated that if possible they get professional help with the task. He commended Frankfort and Mokena for hiring a planning firm in 1959 to draw up a guide for the growth of those towns but pointed out that plans need updating from time to time to meet changing needs.

The federal and state governments have funds to assist in community planning, he pointed out.

The gas company has the outline of a brochure that can be used as a pattern by communities in compiling their advantages and it is available to those who would like to make use of it. Such information can be forwarded to companies that may be looking for new locations.

The southwest suburban area is a natural in many ways for the accommodation of light industry, various planners have pointed out. For one thing it is the only region left in the Chicago area where there is space. The north and west areas are quite filled up and the presence of O'Hare airport makes it necessary for those firms using electronic processes that could interfere with airport signals to locate farther out, it was brought out in the discussion.

One of the things that could hold up industrial development, some feel, is delay in completing the vital link of highway I-80, between Hazel Crest and Joliet. State highway officials at the Elgin office said a couple of years ago that 1964 would segment completed but so far, it was pointed out, the work hasn't even started.

NI-Gas has placed 252 industries in the past year but only eight of them are in the area between Harlem avenue on the east and Joliet on the west. Planners agree, however, that the southwest area is due for a big industrial awakening and communities are urged to have their plans made and endeavor to take advantage of the opportunity.

The gas company is ready to aid any communities in attracting industry.

LW Accredited For 10th Straight Year

Lincoln-Way high school has again received unqualified approval from the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools based on the school's annual report for the 1963-64 term.

This is the 10th consecutive year that the school has received such recognition.

A letter to this effect was recently received by Supt. A. Hunter Chapman and turned over to the board of education.

Lincoln-Way was one of the first schools to be admitted into membership of the North Central Association before its first senior class was graduated in 1954. Previous to that time all new schools seeking admission were required to wait until after the first class graduated.

Supt. Chapman pointed out to the board that any member school deviating from any of the regulations and criteria received automatic advice to correct the deficiency before the ensuing year. In case this correction is not accomplished, the school is then officially warned and finally dropped during the third year.

Automation A Gigantic Problem

(Industrial News Review)
The Administration's 'war on poverty' -- whatever one may think of the strategy and tactics that are proposed -- is a logical political reaction to the unemployment problem. This problem has persisted in the face of the fact that almost all of the accepted business indicators are at record levels, and that the national income was never so high as it is now.

It is a problem that is surrounded with questions of an unprecedented nature. For, across this complex political, economic and social landscape, automation now sweeps with the speed and face-changing power of an avalanche. What will be its effect on employment, and can a free society based on the importance of the individual survive the tendency of automation to move toward the solving of problems on a mass rather than on an individual basis?

That is the big question. Defining the nature of automation and understanding how it differs from the technological change of the past is the first step in learning how to live with it. Jules Loh, an AP newsfeature writer, points out that the radical new element which mankind faces is "...not just the development of 'thinking' machines, such as computers, but the blending of thinking machines with doing machines." A machine called the TransfeRobot, with a swinging arm and hand, can be programed to do a great number of mechanical jobs. It can do them tirelessly in exactly the same way each time and with absolute accuracy down to two-thousands of an inch.

In developing a picture of the magnitude of the problem before us, Mr. Loh draws on many authoritative sources. For example, he quotes Edward B. Shils, professor of industry at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School. Professor Shils states that, "It appears possible that almost any physical process controllable by man can be made to control itself." Mr. Loh points out that "Another significant feature of automation is that machines, performing tasks beyond the capacity of mere humans, now can do jobs which heretofore were impractical if not impossible."

During the 1960's it has been estimated that 12 million workers will enter the labor force and that during this same time automation will eliminate 24 million jobs.

It's going to be a tall order to prevent a mushrooming problem of unemployment, and at the same time, fit this new kind of automation into a society oriented toward the importance and the freedom of the individual. But if our technological advance is to be judged good in the scales of human well-being, we must do these things. More can be done in the intelligent retraining programs. Vocational and academic training in schools must be geared to the type of society in which we live. Government will take a hand in easing the problems of automation, but if industry, business and education are to remain independent, they must assume their full burden of responsibility in this field. If given a chance, the human animal is amazingly adaptable. Ultimately, the people must step up to the speed of the times in which they live and accepting the fact of change, be prepared to meet it. Education will assume an increasingly important role in developing this kind of citizen.

The President of the New York Stock Exchange recently observed that "Automation has demonstrated an incredible capacity for increasing productivity and for developing goods and services which earlier generations could not even envision... let us acknowledge the facts of this country's economic history and realize that we have the capacity to shape technology to meet our economic needs. The willingness--the eagerness, if you will--of all of us in business, in education, in government, to make the necessary effort holds the key to the continuing development of the most productive and most rewarding economy in the world."

The challenge is upon us. This would seem to be a good philosophy with which to meet it.

wonder if we aren't getting too much of it all at once. Anyone that criticizes the modern trend is indignantly shushed as a square or a fossil.

"IT WAS A LONG TIME ago that Longfellow got off that bit about 'life is real, life is earnest' but it could serve as a motto for today.

"The world has gone cause conscious in a big way. A person who isn't embroiled in a lot of causes today is a pretty lonely fellow. He does have this advantage tho, he has an opportunity to use his leisure time for a little leisure. His ears get a rest too.

"It seems that a lot of people feel they aren't doing their part unless they are getting all steamed up over space travel, civil rights, H-bombs, trouble in Europe, trouble in Asia, trouble in Africa, trouble in the Near East, trouble in the Far East, trouble in the U.N., juvenile delinquency, health problems, school problems, labor problems, economic problems, community problems, family problems and problem problems.

"It takes so much rushing about to get in on all these things that people don't have time to sit down for a spell and relax. That takes too much time. The way to solve this problem, if you believe some people, is to rush until run down then rush to the doctor and then rush to the hospital.

"A good causer can't spare the time really to be sick so he is up and running again as soon as possible with the aid of tranquilizers and vitamin pills.

"EVERY CAUSE has its organization or association. Some of them have several so the conscientious person who is determined to do his civic and community duty has to belong to all of them. These boards and associations, however, have a good purpose. A long list of them looks impressive in an obituary.

"More persons are going ga-ga and when you stop to think how serious life has become it is not surprising. Most of the plays, the movies, the TV shows, novels, short stories and a lot of the non-fiction one encounters today deal with psychos, perverts and maniacs. The whodunits,

SOUND AND FURY SIGNIFYING...?

Timely Warning

We are sorry to have to interject a sombre note in the otherwise joyous observance of Spring.

Our warning has to do with bicycles. Now that the good weather is setting in, children will be dragging their bikes out of storage places and taking to the streets and highways.

If these ardent cyclists don't know the proper and safe way to handle their bikes they can be easily involved in dangerous traffic situations. Last year -- the National Safety Council points out -- 550 lives were lost in bicycle accidents, the heaviest toll since 1949.

Since the majority of the fatalities fell in the 5 - to - 14 age group it would seem to us that parents should insure that their children are fully aware of,

and practice, safe bicycling habits. The Council particularly urges observance of the following rules:

- * Ride on the right side of the road; obey all traffic control regulations and use proper hand and arm signals for turns and stopping.

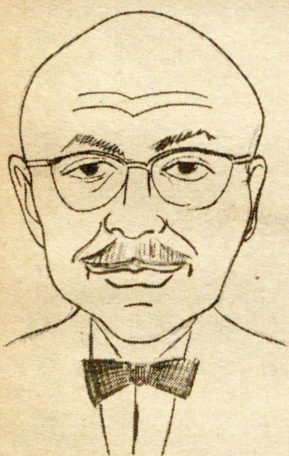

- * When cycling with others, ride in single file.

- * Save stunting and showing-off for yards or other untrafficked areas.

- * Never try to squeeze in between two lanes of traffic.

- * At busy intersections it is safest to dismount and walk the bike across.

- * At night the bike should be equipped with a front light and rear reflector.

THOT

By Glenn Logan

JEFFERSON P. THROTTLEBOTTOM, S.F.E. (Society of Freeloading Experts) was voicing a complaint as he busied himself transferring cigars from my box to his pocket.

"I don't believe these cigars are as good as they were," he declared. "Perhaps the last couple of boxes came from a batch of bad tobacco. Perhaps the maker, finding this particular shape and name has met with such popular acclaim that he believes he can coast on their reputation and has cheapened the product. Or it may be that he has gone completely modern.

"I mean," Jeff continued, "that perhaps he succumbed to automation. Maybe he is relying entirely on modern methods. You know, let a computer select the tobacco seed and the place to plant it, with the planting of the seedlings done thru radio, and the crop harvested, cured and rolled by robots. If they don't improve pretty soon I think you should try another brand and let them feed these back into the computer."

Jeff fired up one of the offending tubes and looked at it critically.

"Progress is alright," he went on, "but sometimes I long looked upon as escape reading, have gone psycho too. Good, clean murders without a maniac are hard to find these days.

"Now authors are business people and if the public didn't like, didn't want that kind of stuff, they wouldn't write it.

"I just hope we don't forget how to laugh. Forgetting how to laugh may become another problem. The comedians and their writers are having an increasingly difficult time to get material.

"It seems that as time goes by the stuff they can use becomes more limited. Every minority group screams in high C if one of their number, or the group, becomes part of a joke. It has reached the point now where a comedian can only make comments concerning himself, his wife, his parents or brothers and sisters without running a risk of being sued.

"I DON'T KNOW how real life is the way a lot of people want to live but will attest that it is earnest. I don't want to live in the past and have no intention of doing so but there were some very good things in the past. For instance, pride of workmanship. That seems to be considered very old fashioned now. Get the stuff out and get the money appears to be the trend today. Perhaps the robots of automation are the answer to that one, altho if all of us are put out of work where is the money coming from to buy what the machines turn out?

"Another thing we found good in the past was that parents chose to be parents rather than pals and the kids had a chance to be kids. I suppose that some expert will point out that I am wrong, that we had a lot of juvenile problems in the past. That may be but it didn't take a lot of so-called experts to come up with answers either. The experts have a very nice thing going now and one wouldn't expect them to give it up without a struggle and a huge torrent of multi-syllable words.

"That comes under the problem problems. It seems that half of the people have problems and the other half are experts striving to solve them.

New United Jet Offers 1 Class

The dramatic tri-engine Boeing 727, offers the most advanced jet transport in the world, according to United Air Lines.

Even before it got off the ground, United's 727 was designed for one-class and 90-passenger five abreast seating. These seats, 19 inches wide, are the same as those presently used on United's Boeing 720 jetliners. Spacing between rows of seats is 36 inches on the 727.

Approximately 1.8 million passengers have flown United's One-Class, which was introduced March 10, 1963, as a solution to the problems of mounting fare complexity, cramped coach sections and wide-open spaces of first class. Load factors on One-Class have run appreciably higher than the company's overall system load factor. All 40 of United's new 727s will offer One-Class accommodations, and as more of these aircraft enter service, percentage of service in One-Class will increase.

One - Class service, in which the familiar cabin partition is eliminated, offers complimentary meals and beverages at appropriate hours. It is priced slightly higher than coach, and less than first class.

From the moment you board United Air Lines 727 Jet Mainliner, it is apparent this plane -- representing a novel departure in aircraft design -- was built for the needs of the passenger.

When boarding from the rear, the self-contained loading stairs -- illuminated by small foot lights as well as overhead lights -- provide safe and easy cabin access. Controls for the stairs operate hydraulically.

Windows are 10 inches by 14 inches, providing excellent visibility. Located on the right side of the cabin, just forward of the wing area, is the gallery. This mid-location allows you to receive your meal promptly, no matter where you sit.

NEI Plan Group Gets Grant To Study Air Pollution

(CNS) - The Northeastern Illinois planning commission announced it has received a $136,000 federal grant to help finance a metropolitan-wide study of air pollution in the six-county Northeastern Illinois area.

U.S. Urban Renewal Commissioner William Slayton said the commission would receive the grant under the terms of the urban planning program. The grant is the first of its kind ever given in the United States, Mathew L. Rockwell, executive director of the commission noted.

The new study is aimed at a preventive strategy for minimizing air pollution thru land use planning and regulation.

The project will include gathering existing data in relationship to existing and future land use; and on air pollutants and meteorological and economic as well as health factors and analyzing the data for recommendation to local governments for a cooperative strategy.

Most of the local funding for the 24-month project will be provided by the City of Chicago with $50,000 in non-cash services by the department of air pollution control, headed by James V. Fitzpatrick. Other funds include $15,000 from the State of Illinois, and $3,000 in commission funds.

Rockwell said that the commission's agreement with the department of air pollution "is an excellent example of planning cooperation to solve a problem which effects all of the metropolitan Chicago area."

The commission will use data compiled by all local governments, including air pollutant studies recently started by the county building department.

The county department last month released balloons to study air currents to find out in what direction pollutants are carried during various parts of the day and month. Balloons have been reported as far south as Miami, Fla., and as far east as Pittsburgh, Pa.

Most of the balloons landed in a line from Indiana thru Northern Ohio, according to the building department.

Rockwell said that he expected further grants would be made following the end of the 24-month study period.

Weber was the hero of the day for his score pulled the championship out of the fire. Sandburg trailed Homewood-Flossmoor with Weber its only chance, for with Weber still out on the course Curt Velnick's 89 was the next lowest. That would mean unless Weber came in with an 87 Sandburg would lose by one stroke, but Weber's came thru.

Winning the District meet enables the Carl Sandburg team to compete in the state championship meet this Friday and Saturday. (May 15 and 16) on the Savoy Course near Champaign.

On May 18 the Eagles will compete for the Southwest Suburban crown. In this meet Sandburg's chief rival should be Homewood-Flossmoor. In that meet Sandburg's coach Richard Finley predicts that if the weather is favorable the winning score would be about 318 or an average of 80 per man.

MILERS COME CLOSE — Sandburg's mile relay team would have qualified for the Illinois high school state track meet at Champaign but a curve judge ruled that a Viking runner had been cut off so disqualification washed out the Eagles time of 3:30.6. Upper left photo shows Larry McNeil,

Ruling Bars Eagle Mile Relay Team From State Competition

BY TIM SEDGWICK

Carl Sandburg failed to qualify anyone in last Saturday's district track meet for the state meet this weekend, though the mile relay team's disqualification is under protest.

The only points scored by the Eagles at the Bloom district were from Jim Reeves's fourth in the mile run. His 4:37.8 was a new school record, but was 2.8 seconds from state qualifying.

The mile relay team of Ernie Sharpe, Doran Harding, Leonard Beesley and Larry McNeil were disqualified, but ran a 3:30.6, which would have qualified them for the state meet, set a new school record and given them a fourth place. The disqualification came from a curve judge who said that an Eagle runner cut off a boy from Homewood Flossmoor. There was disagreement by others who saw the race. A protest was registered by Sandburg coach Robert Gadt. At the time of this writing no response had come from the officials to whether Sandburg's time would be recognized, allowing the relay team to go to the state meet.

In team scoring Bloom won with 62 points, Thornton and Joliet next with 21, H-F 14, Rich East 13, Kankakee 12, De LaSalle 9, University High 8, Thornton F. South 8, Herscher 6, Marion 5, Thornton F.
